Where Does the Responsibility Rest.

The financial and business condition of the country seems to be growing worse.

Manufacturing and other enterprises are closing each day with almost the same regularity that the sun sets. The people, and especially farmers and working classes are at arrest. They seem dissified, discontented and broken up. Thousands are without bread and employment and clamoring for something with which to sooth their ills. We have desperation, anxiety, murmuring, and almost universal chaos. What is the cause of the complex situation? Who is to blame?

If any class, what? If individuals, who?

If a political party, which?

Where does the responsibility rest?

Some attribute it to the political parties. The Democrats say the Republicans are responsible.

Republicans are equally as pronounced in their belief that the Democrats are to blame. Who can tell? It is very natural for either to say that the other is to blame, and it is likewise natural for outsiders and soreheads to say the cause rests with both of the parties. The trouble is our people are not working together. Our representatives in congress are antagonistic to each other and striving for supremacy over the other.

As a result they are accomplishing little.

It seems that from congress we can expect nothing, and equally as little from the people. There are hundreds of thousands of sincere and honest men in the country who deeply deplore the present situation and who, on account of the prevailing hard times, indulge in the probable result of the panic. They are constantly giving various expressions to feelings of anxiety and apprehension on one hand, and making suggestions or inquiry on the other as to how prosperity and good times can be restored. No one can doubt that it is necessary for our representatives to pull together and that they should be strongly backed by the people. A divided people can not hope to prosper. We must live in unity and walk hand in hand together. Men should not allow political or personal differences to keep them from doing right, but remember all are striving to reach the same goal. Why not stand together?

We have too much politics and too little business. Too much politics hurts worse than none at all. For the situation, who is responsible? Not I, says Mr. Republician. Not I, cries Mr. Democrat. Not I, cries Mr. Republican.

Then who is?—Richmond Paragraph.

FRAID O' SQUATTERS.

Said to Be Dangerous to Take Depositions in Breathitt County.

An Interesting History of the Suit by the South Heirs—For Twenty Years They Have Not Visited the Property.

The famous and involved litigation surrounding the suit of N. C. Morse and others against the South heirs came up before Judge Barr, of the Federal circuit court, this morning on a remarkable motion made by Barry South, one of the defendants. He filed affidavits stating that it was dangerous to take depositions of certain witnesses at their homes in Breathitt county, and asked an order of court authorizing it to be done at Jackson, the county seat.

The case is the most remarkable one. Long before the war the Hon. Jerry South, who for years was a king-bean in Kentucky politics and lessor of the Frankfort penitentiary, bought, along with Judge Brock, an immense tract of land in Breathitt county. The purchase price was considered practically valueless. No attention was paid to it by the owners, and it was taken possession of by squatters, who built houses and eked out a bare existence.

When Jerry South died the Breathitt county lands were a part of the large estate which he left his heirs. The land, it was later found, covered cannel coal fields, and as facilities for transportation improved the squatters not only operated mines, but felled the valuable timber.

In the meantime Judge Brock had disposed of his part of the property, but the land was never divided and N. C. Morse and others who inherited it from the purchased brought suit for a partition, the South heirs, of which there are several branches, became involved in litigation, and now it would be hard to accurately define the legal status of the many suits.

To bring the cases to trial in the Federal court at Frankfort, to which they were assigned, it is necessary to secure depositions of a number of squatters and other witnesses who reside on the land.

These people, it is represented by Barry South, are lawless and desperate and it would be as much as his life is worth to make the attempt to invade the neighborhood. The leader of the squatters is Bill Strong, one of the most notorious men in the state, so Mr. South says. Strong is a sort of feudal hero, exercising over his own neighbors a greater power than ever did landed baron in the days of night-errantry. He was one of the leading spirits in the Strong Little faction on one side and the Burnett faction on the other, in which, it will be remembered, Judge Burnett was killed, and to suppress which the Louisville Legion was sent to the mountains. So much feared is Strong that on one occasion when his son was arrested for some offense nobody had temerity enough to try him. Bill has been a terror to government officers, and it was his followers who a few years ago planned to burn General Deputy Collector Spurrier alive for having made some seizures of illicit stills in the neighborhood.

Mr. South, in his statements to Judge Barr, said that the Souths had never for the past twenty years dared to visit the property, and that in order to have the property cared for a receiver had been asked for and had been appointed by the county court. This receiver was Prof. Goff, a prominent educator of Jackson.

Mr. South's statements as to the danger which attends the efforts to take depositions in Breathitt were supported by affidavits from several persons, among them Prof. Goff, Mr. J. B. Markham, United States Commissioner at Frankfort, and a representative of the Morse interests, contended that there would be no danger, and that no demonstration had ever been made by any of the witnesses. Each South and Markham was placed on the stand and catechized by the other, but the verbal passages at arms became so tart that Judge Barr took the examination into his own hands.

He finally granted Mr. South's motion taking occasion to say that he was execiously sorry to hear that there was any section of Kentucky in which depositions could not be taken without the risk of bodily harm. The depositions will be taken in the circuit court clerk's office at Jackson. An exception is made in the case of one of the witnesses, an old woman, whose physical infirmities will not permit a trip to Jackson. Her deposition will be taken in the vicinity of the home.

Mr. South, who made the motion before Judge Barr, was formerly warden of the Frankfort penitentiary and is a son of Jerry South. The motion was a most unusual one.—Louisville Times, May 2.

Sterling, has returned from New York and reports all going nicely with the project. On the action of Morgan county and the citizens along the proposed line depends altogether the expedition with which the road will be pushed. Some weeks ago Mr. Broas submitted a proposition to Morgan county at West Liberty by which $25,000, payable in twenty-year bonds, was asked as a help toward the expense of building. A vote on this will be had soon. Rights of way the entire distance have been asked and in most cases granted. Mt. Sterling to gain the road, will raise $25,000 additional among its citizens. The Morgan County Canal Coal, Land and Lumber company offers $24,000 for the enterprise. Another eastern land company offers $8,000, while J. M. Pieratt, a prominent Morgan county merchant, proposes to the people of the county that he will pay the $25,000 asked if they will guarantee him the salt trade of the county for ten years at the present prices.

TO A SCHOOLGIRL

Her smooth head bending low,
She moves with eager joy,
Past the green and golden bower,
Over the old tale of Troy.
Dear heart, an innocent soul!
The sun's bright growing years,
As thy quick steps follow, roll,
Bring joy, not tears.

For thou let knowledge spread
History's tenued page,
Quaint thoughts of sages dead,
The world's great woe,
Gain patient science gives,
And lettered fancies fine,
The world's bright which lives,
Deepest, divine.

For these I trust make wake
Deep, inarticulate chords,
Which the rapt soul can take
Sweeter than any words,
Art's purest smile,
Through gates wreathed with flowers,
And fairy dreams beguile
Thy blanched hours.

But may no harm come
To those who regard eyes;
Still let the morning hymn
And orisons arise,
Leave the world which the mind,
And not the heart, can move,
Still, girl, thy treasure find
In faith and love.

PART II.

The moment for which I had waited so long had at last come. I had my enemies within my power. Together they could protect each other, but singly they were at my mercy. I did not, however, with undue precipitation. My plan was well formed. There is no satisfaction in vengeance unless the offender has time to realize who it is that strikes him, and why retribution has come upon him. I had my plans arranged by which I should have the opportunity of making the man who had wronged me understand that his end had found him. It clicked into place two days before a gentleman who had been engaged in looking over some houses in the Brixton road had dropped the key of one of them in my carriage. It was claimed that same evening and returned; but in the interval I had taken a moulding of it, and had a duplicate constructed. By means of this I had access to at least one spot in this great city where I could rely upon being free from interruption. How to get Drebber to that house was the difficult problem which I had now to solve.

"He walked down the road and went into one or two liquor-shops, staying for nearly half an hour in the last of these, and then got out on a suggestion in his voice, and was evidently pretty well off. There was a hansom just in front of me, and he hailed it. I followed. It so close that the nose of my horse was within a yard of his driver's whole way. We rattled across Waterloo bridge and through miles of streets, until to my astonishment, we found ourselves back in the terrace in which I had stayed. I could not imagine what his intention was in returning there; but I went on and pulled up my cab a hundred yards or so from the house. He entered it and his hansom drove away. Give me a glass of water, if you please. My mouth gets dry with the talking."

I handed him the glass and he drank it.

"That's better," he said. "Well, I waited for a quarter of an hour or more, when suddenly there came a noise like people struggling inside the house. Next moment the door was flung open and two figures, one of whom was Drebber and the other was a young chap whom I had never seen before. This fellow had Drebber by the collar, and when they came to the head of the step he gave him a shove and a kick which sent him half across the road. 'You hound!' he cried, shaking his stick at him: 'I'll teach you to insult an old girl!' I thought so hot that I think he would have threatened Drebber with his cudgel, only that the scoundrel lay down the road as fast as his legs would carry him. He ran as far as the corner, and then, seeing my cab, he hailed me and jumped in. 'Drive me to Hallday's private hotel,' said he.

"When I had him fairly inside my cab my heart beat so with fear that I feared lest at this last moment my nerves might go wrong. I drove along slowly, weighing in my mind what it was best to do. I might take him right out into the country, and there in some deserted lane have my last interview with him. I had almost decided upon this when he solved the problem for me. The crux for Drebber had seized him again, and he ordered me to pull up outside a gin palace. He said in leaving word that I should wait for him. There he remained until closing-time, and when he came out he was so far gone that I knew the game was in my own hands.

"Don't imagine that I intended to kill him in cold blood. It would only have been cold justice if I had done so, but I could not bring myself to do it. I had long determined that he should have a show for his life if he chose to take advantage of it. Among the many billets which I have filled in America during my wandering life, I was once a janitor and sweep-out of the laboratories at York College. One day the professor was keeping on poisons, and he showed his students some alkaloid, as he called it, which he had extracted from some South American arrow poison, and which was so powerful that the least grain meant instant death. I spotted the bottle in which this preparation was kept, and when they were all gone I helped myself to a little of it. It was a fairly good dispenser, so I worked this alkaloid into small, soluble pills, and each pill put in a box with a similar pill made without poison. I determined at the time that, when I had my chance, my gentlemen should each have a draw out of one of these boxes, while I ate the pill that remained. It would be quite simple, and I could deal less noisy than firing across a handkerchief. From that day I had always my pill-boxes about with me, and the time had now come when I was to die.

"It was nearer one than twelve, and a wild, bleak night, blowing hard and raining in torrents, as usual it was outside. I was glad within that I could have shouted out from pure exultation. If any of your gentlemen have ever pined for a thing and longed for it during twenty long years, and then suddenly found it within your reach, you would understand my feelings. I lit a cigar and puffed at it to steady myself, but I was still very trembling and my temples throbbing with excitement. As I drove, I could see old John Ferrier and sweet Lucy looking at me out of the darkness and smiling at me, just as plain as I see you all in this room. All the way they were ahead of me, one on each side of the horse, until I pulled up at the hotel.

"There was just a sound to be seen, no sound to be heard except the dripping of the rain. When I looked in at the window I found Drebber all huddled together in a drunken sleep. I shook him by the arm. 'It's time to go out,' I said.

"'All right, cubby,' said he.

"I suppose he thought I had come to the hotel that he had mentioned, for he got out without another word and followed me down the garden. I had to walk beside him to keep him steady, for he was still a little top-heavy. When we came to the door I opened it and led him into the front room. I give you my word that, all the way,

"HE GAZED AT ME WITH BLEARED EYES EVER A MOMENT."

the father and daughter were walking in front of us.

"'It's infernally dark,' said he, stamping about.

"'Well soon have a light,' I said, reaching a match and lighting it to a candle which I had brought with me. Now, Enoch Drebber I examined, turning to him, and holding the light to my own face: 'Who am I?' He gazed at me with bleared, drunken eyes for a moment, and then I saw a horror spring up in them and convulse his whole features, which I staggered back with a vivid start, and I saw the perspiration break out upon his brow, while his teeth chattered. At the sight I leaned my back against the door and laughed loud and long. I had always known that vengeance would be sweet, but had never hoped for the contentment of soul which now possessed me.

"'You dog!' I said: 'I have hunted you from Salt Lake City to St. Petersburg, and you have always escaped me. Now at last your wanderings have come to an end, for either you or I shall never see to-morrow's sun rise.' He shrank still further away as I spoke, and I could see on his face that he thought I was mad. I stopped him, however, for the time. The pulses in my temples beat like sledge-hammers, and I believe I would have had a fit of some sort if the blood had not gushed from my nose and relieved me.

"What do you think of Lucy Ferrier now?" I cried, looking the door and shaking the stick in his face. His hansom had been slow in coming, but it had overtaken you at last. I saw his coward lips tremble as I spoke. He would have begged for me, but he knew well it was useless.

"Would you murder me? he stammered.

"There is no murder," I answered.

"Who talks of murder and dog?"

What misery laid you upon my poor darling when you dragged her from her slaughtered father and bore her away to your accursed and shameless harlot?

"It was not I who killed her father," he cried.

"But it was you who broke her innocent heart," I shrieked, thrusting the box before him. "Let the high God judge between us! Choose who there is dead, one or the other in the other. I shall take what you leave. Let us see if there is justice upon the earth, or if we are ruled by chance."

"He cowered away with wild cries and prayers for mercy, but I drew my knife and held it to his throat until he had obeyed me. Then I swallowed the box in front of his eyes, and the next thing I knew, this young man here had the bracelets on my wrists, and neatly shackled as ever I was in my life. That's the whole story, gentlemen. You may consider me to be a murderer; but I hold that I am just as much an officer of justice as any man.

So thrilling had the man's narrative been, and his manner was so impressive, that we had sat silent and absorbed. Even the professional detectives, black as they were in every detail of crime, appeared to be keenly interested in the story of the student who finished his far-fetched minutes in a stillness which was only broken by the scratching of Lestrade's pencil as he gave the finishing touches to his shorthand account.

"There is only one point on which I should like a little more information," Sherlock Holmes said at last. "Who was your accomplice to come for the ring which you lost?"

The prisoner winked at my friend joyously. "I can tell my own secrets," he said, "but I don't get other people into trouble. I saw your advertisement, and I thought it might be a plant, or it might be the ring I wanted. My friend volunteered to go and see. I think you'll own he did it smartly."

"Not a doubt of that," said Holmes, heartily.

"Now, gentlemen," the inspector remarked gravely, "the forms of the law must be complied with. On Thursday the prisoner will be brought before the magistrates, and your attendance will be required. Until then I will be responsible for his safety, and the best way to speak and Jafferson Hope, I am told off by a couple of warders, while my friend and I made our way out of the station and took a cab back to Baker street.

THE CONCLUSION.

We had all been warned to appear before the magistrates upon the Thursday; but when the Thursday came there was no occasion for our testimony. A higher Judge had taken the matter in hand, and Jefferson Hope had been summoned before him, where strict justice would be meted out to him.

"The blood had been streaming from my nose, but I had taken no notice of it. I don't know what that put it into my head to write upon the wall behind the bed that he had mentioned, for he got out without another word and followed me down the garden. I had to walk beside him to keep him steady, for he was still a little top-heavy. When I walked into the cab and found that there was nobody about, and that the night was still very mild, I had driven some distance, when I put my hand into the pocket in which I usually kept Lucy's ring and found that it was gone. I was very much annoyed at this, for it was the only momento that I had of her. Thinking that I might have dropped it when I stooped over Drebber's body, I drove back, and, leaving my cab in a side street, I went boldly up to the house—for I was ready to do anything rather than lose the ring. When I arrived, I found that the man who was coming out, and only managed to disarm his suspicions by pretending to be hopelessly drunk.

"That was when Enoch Drebber came to his end. All I had to do was to pay as much for Stangeron, and so pay off John Ferrier's debt. I knew that he was still at Halliday's private hotel, and I hurried back to the cab, but he never came out. I fancy that he suspected something when Drebber failed to put in an appearance. He was cowering, was Stangeron, and always on his guard. If he thought he could keep me off by staying indoors he was very much mistaken. I soon found out which was the window of his bedroom, and early next morning I took advantage of some ladders which I had

It is now announced from Washington that the tariff bill will pass the senate not later than June 15, and congress adjourns the Fourth of July. A long suffering people hope it will be so.

Bob Kneep, who was arrested in Berlin Saturday for working in a "ringer" on the German trotting horsemen, had a bad record this country, having been ruled off several tracks for crooked work.

The William M. Whiteley reaper and mower works at Muncie, Ind., were destroyed by fire last Sunday evening, throwing between 300 and 500 men out of employment and causing a loss of $245,000.

A party of kidnapers have been working St. Joseph, Mo., for some time, and the disappearance of six or seven children in as many days has alarmed the authorities and led to investigation going on.

The news comes from Westerville, Pa., the south end of the Chillicothe coke region, that an epidemic of fear is prevailing there. In a battle on Saturday Deputy Sheriff White and Chief Clerk Ewing were terribly beaten by Poles.

At a school election held in Lawrenceburg, Ky., on Saturday an assessment of thirty cents on the $100 was voted for school purposes, the vote being 104 for the tax and 49 against it. A poll tax of $1 for the same purpose was also voted.

A man named Price was murdered near Perry, Oklahoma, Sunday. He was living alone and had been dead but a short time when found. Jim McBride, a near neighbor, and "Doo" Markham, an auctioneer of Perry, were arrested on suspicion.

Chief of Police Bowman, of Barboursville, Ky., was on Saturday sentenced to the penitentiary for life for the murder of William Beeler, of that place, in January last. Police Judge Jones was also implicated in the crime, but he has not yet been tried.

One of the most noted Lexington Sunday, the Rev. H. C. Morrison, the "boy preacher," used language in his sermon which was accepted as a bitter arraignment of Col. W. G. Breckinridge. Three other ministers, however, preached sermons which were interpreted as asking forgiveness for him.

In a joking way Col. Hodges, of the Lexington Observer, told C. C. Moore, of the Blue Grass Blaze, that he would kill the man who published anything reflecting upon his character. Moore took the matter seriously, and had Col. Hodges bound over to keep the peace, the bond being $3,000, which was promptly furnished.

The Mr. Sterling Advocate in its last issue pays a very high tribute to ex-Chief Justice Peters, and suggests the propriety of placing his portrait in the court house at that place as a token of the esteem in which he is held. The Advocate is to be commended for its laudable enterprise, and the lawyers of that city, and of all Eastern Kentucky for that matter, would be doing only the proper thing to unite in thus honoring a most noble and useful citizen. Our acquaintance with Judge Peters has been quite limited, but we do know him to be a Christian gentleman and an eminent jurist. Aside from these things, he was the friend of our grandfathers, Rev. Spencer Cooper, a Methodist minister, for whom we are named, and who was quite prominent in the early days of Kentucky. We have sat and listened to Judge Peters talk of our honored and honest relation in such admiring tones that we feel very near to the "old judge," and we should like to see him honored in the same manner.

The many friends of Frank Bolin will be pleased to learn that he has consented to become a candidate for the office of justice of the peace for this magisterial district. Mr. Bolin was left an orphan when but 14 years old and has ever since followed the honorable occupation of tilling the soil. He is well known to the Democratic voters of the district, has always been a "dyed-in-the-wool" Democrat, and though he has had only a common school education, is well qualified to fill the position to which he aspires.

The election of officers for the Hazel Green fair association was held on Saturday, the 5th inst. H. F. Pieratt was elected president; Ed F. Cecil, first vice president; Jonas Vansant, second vice-president; R. A. Kash, secretary; W. T. Caskey, treasurer. Directors—Jos. P. Rose, H. H. Swango, C. C. Hanks, G. B. Swango, J. H. Vest, W. T. Swango and L. C. Caskey. The fair will begin on Sept. 4th and continue four days.

Democratic Committee Meeting.

At a meeting of the Democratic committee of Wolfe county, held at the courthouse, in the town of Capon, May 7, 1894, on motion of C. C. Hanks, Jonas F. Vansant was elected secretary.

The following resolutions were read and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That for the purpose of ascertaining the strength of the various Democratic candidates for congress in Wolfe county, a primary election is ordered to be held in each voting precinct said county, on Saturday, June 23, 1894, between the hours of 7 o'clock a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m., at which time and places all Democrats, who will be legal voters at the November election in 1894, are entitled to vote; and the candidate receiving the highest number of all the votes cast in said county shall be entitled to receive the full vote of said county in the district convention, to be held at Capon, July 10, 1894.

H. F. Pieratt, county chairman, is empowered and directed to appoint the delegates to said convention, and he is required to select said delegates from the ranks of the political friends of the candidate who should be declared the choice of the Democrats at said primary, and said delegates are to meet a unit on all questions arising in said convention as a majority present may direct.

Each candidate for congress before said primary is required to pay to H. F. Pieratt, county chairman, or or before the 10th day of June, 1894, the sum of $35, and in the event only one of said candidates should pay said amount the one so paying said amount will be required to pay an additional $5 to said chairman by the 15th day of June, and no other name is to be placed on the ballot books.

H. F. PIERATT, Chairman.

Attest:

JONAS F. VANSANT, Secretary.

We received a letter from Knott county last week in which the recent conduct of a certain prominent official was severely criticized and alleged intemperate conduct fully deserved. We thought best not to publish it, although the statements made therein were fully substantiated by the gentlemen from Hindman who were here last week. However we will say this, that if such conduct is again repeated by such official or any one else and the facts are reported to the Democrats from a trustworthy source they will be published and of this the parties interested will take notice.—Carteretts Democrat.

Judge Redwine came up from Campion Tuesday evening, court having adjourned Tuesday morning. The docket was gone through with. Wolfe has but little criminal prosecution, two hangings having stopped crime in that county.—Jackson Hustler.

ENGLISH THE WORLD SPEECH.

The Germans Favor the General Study of the Coming Language.

In an article on the importance of introducing into the schools the study of a universal language (Weltsprache) which recently appeared in the Preussische Jahrbücher Dr. Schroer advocates making the study of English obligatory, not necessarily to the exclusion of the classical tongues, but at least in conjunction with them. "It is not a question of taste or rivalry between the 'moderns' and the 'ancients'; it is simply a historical necessity." The learned professor properly condemns all attempts, however scientific, to construct an artificial world speech, like Volapük. In his opinion a language which possesses neither literature nor art, and which can never obtain a firm hold in the mind, can never serve as a medium of general communication, for the reason that no one will take the trouble to acquire it, merely as a "tool of trade," until it becomes universal; therefore it can never become universal. Such attempts, however, are not only useless, because they can never obtain a firm hold in the mind, but are also needless, for there already exists a universal language—i.e., a language which, by its spread over the whole earth and by the ease with which it may be learned, has gained such a long step in advance that neither natural nor artificial languages can deprive it of its assured position as the future medium of international intercourse. And this language is the English.

Prof. Schroer is careful to warn his readers not to get their aim too high, for to learn to speak and write fluently and correctly a language which holds such a place in the scale of culture and refinement as the English is difficult, but for the average man this is not necessary, for even the average Englishman has but a limited command of his mother tongue, and the daily intercourse of life requires but a small and easily acquired vocabulary. This is true of every language, but the English is particularly well adapted to international relations and mathematical forms render the English easy in comparison with others. "The English language," concludes Prof. Schroer, "is the world speech, and will, to all appearance, become more and more so every year."

During the present century the English-speaking population of the world has increased five-fold, from possibly forty-four million in 1800 to at least one hundred and twenty-five million. No other language has ever been so rapidly developed, no fact in civil history is more significant than this. In every quarter of the world English is the conquering tongue. The wide spread of the British colonial system, and the marvelous growth of the United States, and the facility with which it absorbs every foreign element bear witness to this great fact, and our cousins in Germany are of too practical a turn of mind to be jealous or forgetful of it.

FORTUNE EASILY MADE.

How a Vicereoy of India Made Quarter of a Million Dollars on Exchange.

The story which I gave last week of the viceroy who remitted home the whole of his salary at the privileged rate of $25,000 a month, and then got a portion of the possibilities thus opened up, says Labouchere in London Truth. I have since heard it narrated of one recent viceroy that he first remitted home his salary at the above rate, making out his £25,000 $2,088. He then had the total of £27,088 remitted back again, making out that he had £17,000 or £14,000. The total profit of the two transactions was thus £9,673 per annum, and on this sum, I am told, his lordship, being a nobleman of eccentric habits, pretty well lived. He was thus enabled to earn an enormous sum, estimated from £50,000 to £75,000, during his tenure of office, and it is asserted that at the end of his time he remitted the whole sum to England at the privileged rate, making something between $4,000 and $5,000 more on that transaction.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For Congress.

We are authorized to announce JOSEPH M. KENDALL, of Floyd County, Kentucky, as a candidate for Congress from the Tenth Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce MARCUS C. LITTLE, of Clark county, as a candidate for Congress from the Twelfth Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

For Sheriff.

We are authorized to announce SAM HENRY WILSON as a candidate for sheriff of Wolfe county, subject only to the will of the people at the polls in November, 1894.

For Justice of the Peace.

We are authorized to announce JAMES H. SEBASTIAN, of Davyboro, as a candidate for Justice of the Peace for the Hazel Green district, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 26, 1894.

We are authorized to announce R. M. CECIL, of Stillwater, as a candidate for Justice of the Peace for the Holly and Stillwater districts, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 26.

We are authorized to announce J. H. WEST, of Gillmore Creek, as a candidate for Justice of the Peace for the Hazel Green and Lee City district, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 26.

Dick Tate's Defalcation.
The surviving sureties on the official bond of ex-Treasurer Dick Tate held a consultation yesterday afternoon and decided to accept the judgment against them for $24,000 rendered by Judge Cantrell, and will pay it off at once, in preference to carrying the case to the court of appeals. This judgment, while small, is the first one in all of the state's litigation with the bondsman in which it has secured a victory, and encourages the attorneys for the commonwealth to believe that on the same line of policy as followed in this case, they will ultimately win the $62,000 case now pending in the court of appeals, which, if secured, together with the $24,000 to be paid under yesterday's judgment and the $92,000 realized from Tate's assets, would leave only about $70,000 of the defalcation unpaid.—Frankfort cor. Courier-Journal.

Mrs. Maggie Cassie, well known as a tarty trimmer in millinery and an artistic dressmaker, is now with Mrs. Lou Day, of this place, and will be pleased to attend to the wants of any who may need work in either line. Everything new in millinery is being constantly added, including the latest styles in hat and bonnet frames, and they will be trimmed up in any style desired, at the lowest price. Give her a call when in need of anything of the kind.

B. Went to Breathitt for a Bride.
J. W. Cummings, of Clay City, and Miss Eunice Howard of this county presented themselves at the editor's room last Monday night at 9 o'clock, and received the rights of matrimony at his hands. The groom is a young man of excellent habits, good business qualifications and a successful teacher. The young lady is the daughter of Wilson Howard, of Quicksand creek, where Mr. Cummings has been teaching school. The young people have our best wishes for their happiness and prosperity and our earnest desire is that they may have long lives in which to prepare for a still happier estate.—Jackson Hustler.

Mr. Cumming was formerly a citizen of this place, and taught the public school here for a part of one term. We congratulate him.

The best way to avoid scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness is to use the best preventive known for that purpose—Half's Hair Renewer.

Suicided in Presence of His Parents.

Joel Gay, aged twenty-one years, the only son of Capt. Weedon D. Gay, of Bowen, Powell county, committed suicide on the 2d inst., by shooting himself through the brain with a rifle in the yard of his father's residence in the presence of his father and mother, the former trying to prevent it. Young Joel and his father had been up in Bowens and had returned home a short time before the sad occurrence, and there is no known cause for the crime. This is the second suicide committed in the same village within the past month, the former victim being Newton Garrett, aged nineteen.

Economy Means Wealth.

I dropped into Fred Heintz's yesterday and he showed me through his workshops. Among other things of interest he explained to me the jewelers' method of saving what one would naturally think a complete loss. Attached to the bench where gold and silver filigree is done is a shallow pan with a hole in the center which is stopped with a tin cup. The filings and dust fall into the pan, are swept into the cup, and thereby saved. The floor is carefully swept, every piece of machinery is dusted and every particle of dust and piece of litter is put into a barrel and as carefully preserved as the diamonds themselves. When the workers wash their hands the water is poured into a barrel and saved. At the end of the year the trash and dust and dirty water are sent to a firm of smelters in an eastern city, where the precious metals are separated from them. Sometimes there is an aggregation of gold, silver, iron, brass, etc., in one lump, but by some chemical process these are separated into their proper elements. Mr. Heintz saves over $200 yearly, out of these sweepings. One firm in the east, he told me, got 80,000 ounces of silver last year out of the trash that was shipped to them.—Lexington Transcript.

Mr. Heintz has an ad. in this paper, and you, too, can economize, if you will buy one of these fine fountain pens.

Mrs. Lou Day requests us to say to the ladies of Hazel Green and the surrounding country that she has just opened a full and complete line of millinery, dry goods, notions, ladies' dress goods, etc., which she will sell at the lowest price for cash or produce—butter, lard, chickens, eggs, or anything she can put for the table. She has a nice line of trimming and untrimmed hats, for spring and summer, which will be added to from time to time, so that the very latest styles can be found here. She also has a fine line of toilet articles.

About seven or eight months ago I was attacked by a cough, and at once began to take a medicine much advertised as an expectorant, and continued using it until I had taken about six bottles. Instead of giving me relief, it only aggravated my condition, and I sought remedies, but all in vain, and I don't think I had three whole nights' rest during my illness. I began to think that had laid hold of me, and my hopes of recovery were all gone. I was a mere skeleton, but a friend of mine had heard some news and called to see me. He recommended me to try Aye's Cherry Pectoral, and, kindly sending me a bottle, I took it, but with little hopes of recovery. I am thankful, however, to say that it cured me, and I am to-day enjoying the best of health.—J. Wilmet Pace, Mourville, Liberia.

Baby Was Saved.

As the afternoon passenger train was leaving here on Sunday afternoon and just as the engine reached the bridge at the east end of the town the engineer discovered a child on the track near the center of the structure. By a prompt effort the train was stopped, when the little fellow was rescued from his perilous position and taken aboard when the train was backed down opposite to the Clay City hotel and the baby, scarcely old enough to talk, was delivered into the custody of Marshal Joe Johnson. The excitement and curiosity of the incident was in no way lessened when for a considerable time it was impossible to learn whose baby he was. After a canvass of the town, the conclusion was reached that he belonged somewhere up the railroad. Rev. E. W. Marcus lives at a distance of about a half mile beyond the bridge, and upon going in that direction some of the members of the family were met in search of little Edgar, who had evidently attempted to follow his little sister who had gone in that direction to Sunday school. From the appearance of the little fellow, who still wore dresses, he could not have been more than three years old, yet he had gone a distance of half a mile and walked onto the bridge over the high trestle, which forms the approach, and to the middle of the bridge over the center of the river, which is above high water mark, where perhaps becoming frightened he had lain down and was holding on to one of the cross ties for dear life. How he escaped falling through between the ties is a marvel, as he had gone more than one hundred feet to reach the point where he was found, where at nearly every step the space between the timbers would have permitted the passage of his body to say nothing of there being no protection at the sides of the trestle or bridge. Rev. Marcus was away from home at the time and the feelings of the mother at learning of the peril in which her darling had been placed and his almost miraculous escape can better be imagined than described.—Clay City Chronicle.

A Harrodsburg Crank.

A Harrodsburg (Ky.) special says: "All the cranks who are allies of Coxey, probably Harrodsburg furnishes the biggest one of all." C. Peter Springer, a Mexican war veteran and an ex-confederate soldier, has gathered together a half-dozen other equally as big cranks and will soon start for Washington to join the commonwealers. They will go by balloon, and Springer claims he can direct his course all right: that he will take charts, compasses, maps, etc., along with him, and provisions enough for six days. They will land as the balloon needs refilling; and take a fresh start until the journey is finished.

Springer has secured an experienced aeronaut, and says he will contribute $1,000 to Coxey on his arrival at Washington.

Springer is the same party who contributed $100 to Madeline Pollard during the progress of the trial recently closed. He and his half-dozen companions are the only ones known here to join the commonwealers. Springer says he will be one of Coxey's aides, and will accomplish what they want or come home a pauper. Springer has affiliated with the Prohibitionists for a number of years.

Friends at Frankfort.

John M. Rice, whose prospective appointment to one of the new clerical positions in the auditor's office was announced in the Capital a few weeks ago, has just arrived here from his home in Louisville. He was married a few days ago in Morgan county, and he and his bride expect to make Frankfort their home. Mr. Rice, who is a son of ex-Congressman Rice, of Lawrence county, is already well known here, having served in the land office for awhile under Col. Tom Corbett. He will assume his duties in the auditor's office at once, and he and his young wife will be appreciated acquisitions to the social circles of the city.—Frankfort Capital.

The above refers to Mr. Rice and bride, now Miss Genie Cockrell, and we are glad to note that they have found friends in Frankfort.

A Remarkable Coincidence.

Samuel Tate called the attention to a fact heretofore unnoticed by the writer, namely, that the first day of May and the 25th of September invariably come upon the same day of the week as does Christmas. He has found this to be true from actual observation for the past twenty-five or thirty years. Can any of our readers mention any other day of which this is true, or give reason for this occurrence.—Somerset Paragon.

Winchester's Dog License.

The owners of fifty three dogs have paid the required license, and their canine pets are safe for another year. A negro applied to the clerk for a license on his dog. When he was told that it would cost a dollar he became very much excited, claiming that his dog was a very little one, and that as Mr. Landsberg only paid one dollar for his big St. Bernard, his little fyer should have the required protection for a great deal less. Mr. Kohlhass could not make him see it in any other light, and he left declaring that the colored man was being imposed on.—Winchester Democrat.

Quint Daniel, of Ezel, was the guest of his brother-in-law, F. McGuire, of this place on Tuesday night, and when asked the news, replied that the Ezel mill company, is now prepared to do wool carding in the best manner. He had a nice lot of bales printed, which see for particulars.

Miss Rosa Trimble, who has been quite ill for several days past, and apparently hovering between life and death for the last few days, was on Wednesday morning reported to be better. Miss Trimble is a great favorite with every one in this community, and her continued severe illness is quite a shock to them.

That suit you now have on is just a little bit seddy for Sunday wear, and it costs so little to have a new one that you ought to invest at once. When you come down to Mt. SHARP, TRIMBLE & DENTON.

The court house at Campbell, or rather the offices in the court house, are now provided with elegant desks, tables, etc. They are all new and first class, and came from March's furniture store, in Lexington. See his adv. in this paper, and when you want anything in his line go down and see him, or write to him for prices. Joseph C. Lykins, esq., made the purchases for Wolfe county, and deserves great credit for the bargains he secured.

Read the new advertisement, "New Millinery Store, 49 North Broadway, Lexington, Ky." This house is under the management of Mrs. Maggie Howard, well and favorably known to the ladies of this section as a tasty trimmer. While in Lexington recently we visited the new store, and judging from the preparations then going on, we are satisfied that it is one of the most complete establishments in that city. We were then told that Mrs. Howard would put in a new, fresh stock of the latest fashions in millinery, and the receipt of her advertisement this week convinces us that she is now prepared to exhibit as nice a line of goods as can be found anywhere. When you go to Lexington do not fail to call. The location is in the Opera house block.

We are under many obligations to the gentlemen named below for their timely assistance in unloading and housing our new press. The roll of honor is: H. C. Hard, James Lacy, Dr. John Taubee, Arbury Brooks, Mitch Campbell, Howard and Richmond DeBusk, John M. Rose, Curtis Pieratt, Dick Ford, Jerry Elam, Bob Teets, and others whose names have possibly escaped us. And, if it ever comes in your way to render any of them a similar service they may call at sight.

The entertainment at the academy on Tuesday evening last was a pronounced success in every particular. Mr. Swango and Miss Robertson acquitted themselves with honor, and demonstrated beyond a doubt that in elocution and music, respectively, they are masters. All of the pupils who participated did equally well considering their practice, and altogether the affair was an enjoyable one. Mr. Swango's speech was well delivered and received many bursts of applause.

You will want a mower or reaper and binder, and before you make a purchase in that line call and see me under Open House, Mt. Sterling, Ky., where you will also find a full line of hardware and agricultural implements. Also, the best fertilizer for tobacco ever used anywhere. Respectfully, Academy Notes.

Rev. F. M. Tinder is at the Home. S. J. Hill is at home this week with sore eyes.

W. B. Allen spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents at Lykins.

Quite a crowd greeted the participants in the entertainment on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Q. C. Daniels and wife, of Ezel, were at the entertainment Tuesday night.

The "Plutocrat" captivated the audience, and all were glad to hear Mr. James H. Swango.

Misses Lizzie Pieratt and Rachel Nickel, of Ezel, attended the recital on Tuesday night.

Montgomery county was represented by three young ladies, in the exercises on Tuesday evening.

M. P. Williams, of Covington, was a guest of G. A. Williams and E. W. McKinney on Tuesday.

J. R. DeBusk can appreciate the selection he recited Tuesday, for its "nothing to do with," etc.

The change in the daily session is well liked by all. From 7 a. m. till 1 p. m., and from 2 p. m. till 3 p. m.

Shiloh Swango, Henry Murphy and Miss Lou Maxey spent from Friday till Sunday with their parents near Maytown.

Quite a number of persons came in Tuesday night from the neighborhoods of Daysboro, Lacy creek, Gilmore and Grassy.

The best of order prevailed at the last public gathering. No complaint except too much tobacco spit on the floor. Away with the weed!

The boarders at the Home will occupy the seats in front of the stove, on the left of the aisle at the Christian church each evening during the meeting now in progress.

Elder J. T. Pieratt, of your town, will preach at Maytown the third Sunday, morning and afternoon.

I. W. Rose has sold his town property to Mr. Reynolds, and will move to West Liberty soon. We are sorry to lose Mr. Rose from our town, but must submit to the powers that be.

J. B. Cecil, of Ezel, celebrated his 35th birthday last Saturday, 5th inst., by inviting his relatives to just such a birthday dinner as his good wife can get up. There was nothing lacking on that table to make each and every one feel that it was good to be there. Your scribe and his better half were on hand and have been puzzled to know who would have the next one. Mr. Cecil's mother-in-law, eight brothers-in-law, six sisters-in-law, one sister, with uncles, aunts and cousins too numerous to mention were there, and we are sure all did justly to the dinner, if not to themselves.

WINGLESS.

Who says it does not pay to raise mules? Willie Swango was last week offered $150 in cash for a mule, which he refused, but subsequently put it in another mule and sold the two for $265. Mr. Swango has the best Spanish jack in this country (see adv. in this paper), and if you want to raise something that will bring you money remember that it always pays to breed to the best.

W. W. Fyffe, accompanied by a Mr. Higgins, who is also connected with the house of Sanford, Vanore & Co., Portsmouth, O., was a guest of the Day Wednesday evening.

MOVING DAY HINTS.

How Much of the Usual Discomfort May Be Avoided.

As the season for moving and house cleaning approaches, it is well worth while to consider ways and means whereby it may be robbed of half its horrors. It has been said, not without justice, that moving day and house-cleaning time are the most uncomfortable epochs in the household's life. The masculine portion of the family especially feels that depressing influence. It is the desire of all to do as much of the menage to make everything move as pleasantly as this transition state will allow.

To begin with, if good fortune or dairies that you are to move into a new house, or at any rate, one that is not being vacated, as you come into possession, the first step is to have the carpets laid before the cans have started from your former home. It is wise to send the carpets away to a cleaner and have them returned to the new abode just in time to form the background for the chairs and sofa which are to come along. When the carpets are down things do not appear one-half so wildly chaotic, and the feelings to a certain degree are saved by this bit of foresight.

The taking up of carpets necessitates much heavy work, and it is well to hire a man for this purpose, though many men are expert at drawing the tucks themselves. If this is done, do not begin at the top of the house, but take the parlor first, as we assure you from actual experience that by the time two rooms are finished such careful drawing of each individual tack will not distinguish the latter to the naked eye that was shown in the first. If you care most for your parlor carpet we implore you draw the tacks there first.

In packing, barrels are of great service for chins and books, but it is well to mix these two elements indiscriminately. China by itself, books by themselves is the wiser plan. As far as possible, however, pack them in such a way that when the unpacking time comes, you will not be under the painful necessity of undoing the piano from its covering in order to find the coal scuttle. Be absolutely extravagant in the use of your pencil and mark each and every article you are able to identify with it. The generous labeling proves a most delightful means of identification when a host of knobby, heterogeneous paper packages and boxes confront you and you haven't the least idea in which one you put the toasting fork or the baby's bonnet.

Put in a box and think those things that will be wanted at once and then do not lose sight of that treasure chest. As soon as you can, get the men folks settled in some cleared space, for unless they are helping them will feel utterly wretched in the jumble of inanimate objects. A cover-up vanishes in the best of circumstances, for it is hard to say that even the contents of Buckingham palace would not look particularly well in an uncovered wagon, to say nothing of the additional safety that is assured by the large, roomy vehicles with padded sides and rain-proof tops.—Chicago Times.

WHEN THE BELT RAN OFF.

How a Fraction Western Drummer Seared an Englishman.

There was a very green Englishman at Butte City, Mont., who was talking about purchasing land near by for a horse ranch, and as he strolled around the depots he half dozen drummers he happened to meet were put up a job on him. One of them borrowed a coat and hat of a rancho, took the cartridges out of his revolver, and with the weapon held aloft in his hand he suddenly jumped into the waiting-room and yelled:

"Whoop! I'm a cantankerous old fighter, the hellion of the Fighting Eight, I break! I'm a fighter and my gatator? I'm down on everything that walks on two legs, particularly Englishmen. What's the bloody, blooming Briton who called me a liar?"

"What's the row about?" inquired the Englishman as came to a halt and faced yellow.

"The boys' industrial school at Laramie has also been the theater of numerous scandals, and while the board of trustees has whitewashed the management, the stories do not remain smothered, but reappear to bother and worry the administration.

Scores of critics here do not hesitate to say that if Gov. McKinley gave more attention to state affairs and less to cultivating his presidential ambitions he would be a better state and for the inmates of state institutions. One well-informed republican said to the Times correspondent recently:

"I am for McKinley for president in 1896, but I must confess that if he were to show as much lack of executive ability in the white house as he has exhibited in the governor's chair it would be a terrible misfortune and part of the reason for his to be elected."—N. Y.

A POOR GOVERNMENT.

Record of McKinley as Chief Executive of Ohio.

Gov. McKinley's second term as Ohio's chief executive has proved no improvement upon his first from a strict business standpoint. An atmosphere of scandal continues to hang about a number of the state institutions where McKinley office holders have been enjoying their easy places without much regard for the public welfare.

The penitentiary in this city is the greatest of the state institutions. Two thousand prisoners are crowded into it, and scarcely a week goes by that some story about its bad management is not whispered about. Chaplin Dudley fell from grace so far as to have very peculiar financial relations with the warden, and was compelled to resign and had to step down and out. He was the second of McKinley's appointees in that place to retire in disgrace. The warden is being attacked gradually for incompetency even by republican papers. Shocking stories of cruel treatment of prisoners are published frequently and are believed to be well founded. So far as this goes, the Representative Wynn, of Defiance, the democratic leader in the house, recently offered a resolution for a special investigation of the penitentiary, but the republicans, after desperate scrambling, succeeded in getting it withdrawn. The country will believe him guilty of contemplated fraud, and democrats particularly will feel a keen satisfaction in the fact that it is a demo-

One Case in Which Protection Failed to Protect.

Carnegie, Frick & Co. of the Homestead steel company, and the government one hundred and forty thousand dollars for their failure to make armor plates conforming to the specifications of their contract with the government and equal to the highest tests imposed upon them by the naval authorities. The Homestead company resisted the payment of the sum until all opportunities of evasion were exhausted, but was finally compelled to make good the government's losses and redeem the obligations it had entered into at the time the contract was made.

It was protection of tariff protection that Carnegie and Frick made their great campaign fund in 1892. They had then as much tariff protection as Mr. Carnegie had asked for when he filled out the blanks in the steel and iron schedules of the McKinley bill.

It was protection of another sort they were after then. With Carnegie secretary of the navy in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, the perfect armor would have passed inspection and instead of paying out one hundred and forty thousand dollars for failure in specific performance Carnegie and Frick would have been thousands of dollars ahead. They were not, however, so lucky.

The country will believe him guilty of contemplated fraud, and democrats particularly will feel a keen satis-

THE LAST REMNANT.

THE FINAL RALLY OF McKinleyism—"ON TO WASHINGTON!"—Chicago Herald.

The McKinley management of the deaf and dumb institution in this city has also been discredited. Superintendent Clark was investigated two months ago at the governor's direction and the report of the state chartered non-partisan board composed of highly respected gentlemen, and two weeks since a report was submitted to McKinley finding the superintendent incompetent and disqualified by his conduct and qualifications for the place. Among other facts, it was shown that he had been averaging 1000 hours for last year greater than by sixty the largest number of pupils enrolled in any single day. This fact revealed the methods by which Superintendent Clark was able in his last annual report to exhibit the lowest per capita cost of maintenance in the history of the institution.

On the republican platform of Rhode Island to claim the right of McKinleyism to claim the party's name, it was shown that the protection was instituted by democrats, conducted by democrats and the offender sentenced by a democratic judge. —Detroit Herald.

The call for a convention of the republican leagues has a familiar sound, especially in the dogmatic declaration as to the right of the party to claim the name. The people will be heard from in due time; and the leagues will probably find that they know their own mind and business much better than the leaders do. —Detroit Free Press.

A reduction of wages has just been made in the iron works of Cooperstown, N. Y., Trenton, N. J., Mr. M. W. Swift, one of the managers, says in explanation that the reduction was made on account of losses suffered through the business depression, clearly traceable, he declares, to the McKinley bill. "The country could stand almost anything except a McKinley bill," he adds. "Even since the bill was passed wages have decreased." —Lodiville Courier-Journal.

Reed's affection of fear that the passage of the Wilson bill will not put an end to uncertainty is indicative of a purpose to keep up the uncertainty. It is a republican threat to continue the tariff protection for partisan purposes.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Noted Divine Preaches on Easter in Greenwood.

Can Not the Almighty God Return the Voice of One Departed?—Mystery of Resurrection.

The Easter services in the Tabernacle Sunday were attended by immense audiences. Beautiful floral decorations almost hid the pulpit from view, and the great organ gave forth its most rapturous strains in honor of the day. In the forenoon Rev. Dr. Talmage delivered an eloquent sermon on "Easter in Greenwood," the text being taken from Genesis xxiii, 17, 18: "And the field of Hebron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the land of Canaan, were made unto Abraham."

Here is the first cemetery ever laid out. Machpelah was its name. It was an aborescent beauty, where the wound of death was bandaged with foliage. Abraham, a rich man, not being able to bribe the King of Terrors, proposed to give, as far as possible, to cover up the grave, the dead, who doubt previously noticed this region, and now that Sarah, his wife, had died—that remarkable person who at ninety years of age had born to her the son Isaac, and who now, after she had reached 127 years, had expired, had been interred awaiting for a plot for her last resting place. Abraham owned this real estate and after in mock sympathy for Abraham, refusing to take anything for it, now sticks on a big price—400 shekels of silver. The cemetery lot is paid for, and the transfer made, in the presence of witnesses in a public place, for there were no cemeteries in the land during those early times. Then in a cavern of limestone rock Abraham put Sarah, and a few years after himself followed, and then Isaac and Rebekah, and then Jacob and Leah. Embowered picturesquely and memorable Machpelah! That "God's acre" dedicated by Abraham has been the mother of innumerable mortal descendants. The necropolis of every civilized hand has lied with its martyrs.

The most beautiful hills of Europe outside the great cities are covered with oak-clad and funeral vase and arched gateways and columns and parades, and the like, in the neighboring countries. The Vatican Way of Rome was bordered by sepulchral commemorations. For this purpose the Pisa has its arched bas-reliefs and the features of dear faces that have vanished. Genoa has its terraced entablatures, and Constantinople covers with cypress the silent tombs of the dead. The hill of Calvary, on whose heights rest Baluze and David and Marshal Ney and Cuvier and La Place and Mollier, and a mighty group of warriors and poets and painters and musicians. In all foreign nations utmost genius on all sides is expended in the work of interment, monumental and monumental.

On all continents efforts to be second to none in respect to the lifeless body. Every city and town and neighborhood of any intelligence or virtue has, not many miles away, its sacred inclosure, where affection has engaged sculptor's chisel and hammer, and artist and artisan, to make every city, even in the manner which it holds the memory of those who have passed away, by its Cypress Hills, and its Evergreens, and its Calvary, and Holy Cross, and Friends' cemeteries. All the world knows of our countrymen with none more than the inhabitants sleeping among the hills that overlook the sea, and by lakes embosomed in an Eden of flowers, our American Westminster Abbey, an Aerion of mortuary architecture, a Pantheon of mighty ones ascended, elegies in stone, liads in marble, whole generations in peace waiting for other generations to join them. No dormitory of breathless sleepers in all the world has so many mighty dead.

Among the preachers of the Gospel, Bethune and Thomas DeWitt, and Bishop Jones and Tyng, and Abel, the missionary, and Beecher and Huntington, and McTyeire and Chapman, and Bangs, and Chapin, and Noah Schenck, and Samuel Hanson Cox. Among musicians, the renowned Gottschalk and the holy Thomas Hastings. Among philanthropists, Peter Cooper and Isaac T. Hopper, and Lucretia Mott and Isabella Graham, and Henry Bergh, the apostle of mercy of the brute creation. Among the literati, the Carr, Alice and Phoebe; James K. Paulding and John G. Sax. Among journalists, Bennett and Raymond and Greeley. Among scientists, Ormroy Mitchell, warrior as well as astronomer, and lovingly called by his soldiers "Old Stars." Prof. Proctor, and the Drama, splendid men, as I well knew, one of them my teacher, the other my classmate.

Among inventors, Elias Howe, who through the sewing machine did more to alleviate the toil of womanhood than any man that ever lived, and Prof. Morse, the great inventor of the telegraphy; the former doing his work with the noise of the latter with the thunderbolts. Among physicians and surgeons, Joseph C. Hutchins, and Marion Sims, and Dr. Valentine Mott, with the following epithet which he ordered cut in honor of Christian religion: "My implicit faith and hope is in a merciful Redeemer, who is the resurrection and the life. Amen and amen." This is our American Machpelah, as sacred to us as the Machpelah in Canaan, of which Jacob uttered that pastoral poem in one verse: "There they buried Abraham, and Sarah, his wife, there they buried Isaac, and Rebekah, his wife, and there I will be buried."

What is the service I ask and answer what may seem a novel question, but it will be found, before I get through, a practical and useful and tremendous question: What will resurrection day do for the cemeteries? First, I remark, it will be their supplemental resurrection. At certain seasons it is done in all sorts to bring back over the remains of the departed. It may have been suggested by the fact that Christ's tomb was in a garden. And when I say garden I do not mean a garden of these latitudes. The late frosts of spring and the early frosts of autumn are so near each other that you will only find a few months in the year when the ground is not frozen in the field. All the flowers we see to-day had to be picked and coaxed and put under shelter, or they would not have bloomed at all. They are the children of the conservatories. But at this season and through the most of the year, the Holy Land is ablaze with flowers.

You find all the royal family of flowers there, some that you supposed indigenous to the far north and others indigenous to the far south—the daisy and hyacinth, crocus and anemone, tulip and water lily, geranium and ranunculus, mignonette and sweet jaras. In the year before Jesus' birth, we see His earliest offerings, about 1,500 kinds of Holy Land flowers, while among trees are the oaks of frozen climates and the tamarike of the tropics, walnut and willow, ivy and hawthorne, ash and elder, pine and sycamore. If such floral and botanical beauties are the wild growths of the field, think of what the cultivated fields of Palestine must be like.

MORGAN COUNTY.

A Big Syndicate to Buy Up its Mineral Resources.
Judge J. W. Perry has just returned from a trip to Morgan county, in Eastern Kentucky. Accompanying the judge on the trip were several members of the Philadelphia and Boston syndicate that has undertaken the development of the cannel coal fields of Morgan county. The syndicate which has purchased the land and which intends to open up the vast resources of the county to the world is backed with a capital of $300,000, ample evidence that the project will not lack for money. Judge Perry is the attorney for the syndicate, and in speaking of the outlook said to a Leader man that the railroad to be built from Morehead to Pinhook, a small town about ten miles beyond West Liberty, had been surveyed and located, and that ground will be broken about June 1. The road will be standard gauge and will be called the Morehead, West Liberty & Pinhook railroad.

When asked whether he didn't think the present stringency in the money market would retard the work, Judge Perry said no. It was true, he added, that a month or so ago the syndicate had experienced a little trouble in securing money, but everything was now arranged so there would be no hitch. The cannel coal field in Morgan county is unquestionably one of the finest in the world, said Judge Perry. In many parts of the fields the coal could be found of a thickness of 36 to 58 inches. Bituminous coal was also found in great quantities.

Fire clay is also found in layers of from eight to ten feet thick. Coal oil has been found in the county, and there are reasons to believe the county will in time produce a great deal of oil. The company also intends to quarry building stone. Some of the finest stone for building purposes in the world is to be found in Morgan county. The forests contain almost inexhaustible quantities of oak, poplar, sugar, walnut, maple, etc.

In speaking of the trip judge said the people of the county were very anxious for the work to begin. They were very enthusiastic about the county's future and believe that a new era of prosperity would set in very soon. The people, by individual subscription, had raised $20,000 to aid in the building of the road. There will be an election held there some time soon, and it is likely the county will vote an appropriation. If it does, the subscription of the people will not be needed.

The company will put in only the latest improved machinery in the mines. In speaking of the scenery of the country, Judge Perry was very enthusiastic, and said some of it compared favorably with that of Italy and other picturesque countries. Besides the Philadelphia and Boston capitalists, gentlemen of Louisville and Lexington are interested in the project.—Lexington Leader.

It Put It Out Almost Instantly.

Herman B. Wells, president of the Cincinnati Tin and Japan Company, gave an exhibition of the Stetphen Fire Extinguisher, on the vacant lot corner of Market and Sycamore streets, last Saturday afternoon, assisted by Major Arnold, D. R. Merrill and others. A goodly number of people, from town and country, were in attendance; and highly pleased with the workings of the apparatus. Broken pine boxes were piled up, about twelve feet, and the whole structure saturated with coal oil. Then the torch was applied, and in less time than it takes to say jack rabbit, the entire mass was enveloped in flame, shooting upward fully twenty-five feet. Mr. Wells, with hose in one hand, turned on, with the other, the chemical preparation, which swiftly sprayed into the base of the fire, thus extinguishing the same almost instantly. It is claimed that this machine will accomplish more work, in the same length of time, than any other extinguisher manufactured, and costs three-fourths less money. It ought to be in the hands of every property owner, in case of an emergency.—Harrison (O.) Democrat, Nov. 10, 1883.

Cost $400 on the Railroad.

J. G. Deaton, of Crockettville, in Breathitt county, recently lost a pocket book containing $400 in currency and some notes and accounts, while en route from Lexington to Jackson on a K. U. train. He offers $50 in cash for its return to him.

A lady at Tooloo, La., was very sick with bilious colic when M. C. Tisell, a prominent merchant of the town gave her a bottle of Chamberlain's Coic, Cholera and Diarrheal Remedy. He says she was well in forty minutes after taking the first dose. For sale by John M. Rose.

Hon. M. C. Lisle Quite Ill at Washington.
A special from Washington says: "Hon. M. C. Lisle, of Kentucky, is lying dangerously ill at the Woodmont in this city to-night. A number of his Kentucky friends have called, but were denied admittance, the physicians having ordered that no one except attendants be allowed to enter his room. The chances for his recovery are decidedly against him. His many friends in Kentucky regret this sad intelligence."

This above is from the Washington dispatches to the Courier-Journal of Wednesday. Thursday's paper, however, gives hope that the case is not so bad. It says: "Representative Lisle is not quite so ill as he was last night. The treatment he is now undergoing, known as the sweating process, has already had perceptible effect. The doctor sweats him three times in twenty-four hours, and after coming out of the bath Mr. Lisle is, of course, much fatigued. Quite a number of friends called to see him this afternoon. They found him in good spirits and good humor. His brother, Dr. C. Lisle, postmaster at Winchester, arrived here this afternoon, and is at the Woodmont. He came on official business connected with the postoffice department. He expects to return tomorrow. Mr. Lisle may go with him."

Dr. S. F. Scott, Blue Ridge, Harrison County, Mo., says: "For whooping cough Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is excellent." By using it freely the disease is deprived of all dangerous consequences. There is no danger in giving the remedy to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by John M. Rose.

Counterfeiter Caught.

Wednesday night the police were informed that a stranger had been passing counterfeit money in some of the colored restaurants. In a few minutes the man was found and after a lively chase he was captured and lodged in jail. He at first gave a fictitious name, but it was afterward learned that he was John B. Huston Townsend, a son of the famous "Fighting Bill" Townsend, of Estill county, so well remembered by many of our older readers. A quantity of spurious coin was found in his possession, which he claimed he found under a pile of railroad ties. For many years there has been at various times rumors of counterfeits from that section and occasionally arrests are made. Mr. Townsend bids fair to work for Uncle Sam for a while.—Winchester Democrat.

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr, of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up in Wisconsin, and in consequence had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balsm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant." For sale by John M. Rose.

An Old Citizen Visits Us.

John R. Hanks, of Louisiana, stopped over here on Tuesday on his return from a visit to relatives and friends in Wolfe, Menefee and Powell counties. Dr. Hanks was born and reared in Wolfe county, in this state, and went to Louisiana about eighteen years ago. This is his first visit since 1880. His numerous relatives and friends were much pleased at seeing him again. Dr. Hanks married in the state of Mississippi four years ago. He has been practicing medicine at his present location in St. Landry's parish, for about nine years.—Clay City Chronicle.

our Congressional Race.

The Frankfort correspondent of the Courier-Journal says: "A number of tenth district politicians have been here this week, and the reports which they bring concerning the congressional campaign going on up there indicate that it is all over except the shouting. The generally expressed opinion is that young Tom Kendall, of Floyd county, has closed out all of his competitors and virtually has the race won."

Humors of the stomach, salts rheum, and blood disorders, are cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

During the entire week, and until the entire lot is closed out, our 14k Solid Gold Foun-tain Pens go at $1 each, as long as they last. We have one of these pens filled ready for use. Call in and try it.
